Phillip Brisebois

Phillip Brisebois is a 1997 graduate of Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo, where he received a degree in Economics and Business. He joined the Henry Schein company in November 2007 and became the company's E4D specialist. He is one of the first 15 people in the world trained as a specialist in this product, and was instrumental in its launching to the Canadian market. His focus, as a dental representative, has always been digital technology, both in radiology and in CAD/CAM. At present, he serves as COO and co-founder of NOVO Dental Studios.

TOPIC

The focus of the lectures is "A Digital Practice". What is it? A digital practice makes use of all digital technologies from the making of the appointment to the insertion and maintenance of a restoration. This technology, when used properly, better serves to provide the patient with an improved dental experience. Technologies include office management systems and communications, digital photography, radiography and information gathering, charting, lasers, implant planning and placement, digital impression systems, digital fabrication of restorations and digital maintenance.

In addition, we shall provide information on the use of a dental laboratory in digitally fabricating dental restorations. This will include prep design, intra-oral scanning using E4D Dentist Solo, digital Rx and computer-aided design (CAD) restorations for next day delivery.

We anticipate having our digitally directed milling machine on-board for our audience to view the construction of a perfectly matched crown, produced solely from a digital picture. The latter is made by an optical scanner, E4D Dentist Solo. Thus, there is no need for the traditional impression. In practice, the digital photo is electronically transmitted from dental office to laboratory and the finished crown delivered 24 hours later.
